Changes to the Queensland Registered Lobbyists Code of Conduct and Directives

The Integrity Commissioner has approved an updated Queensland Registered Lobbyists Code of Conduct (Code), commencing 1 December 2026. The updated Code has been informed by feedback received from registered lobbyists (lobbyists) and other stakeholders about the Codes that commenced on 1 July 2026 and 17 September 2026.

The Integrity Commissioner has also approved updates to Directives 03/26 to 06/26 (Directives).

This document outlines what has changed in the updated Code and Directives and why.

There are no additional requirements in the updated Code and Directives.

Changes to the Code

Compared to the Code that commenced on 17 September 2026, the updated Code includes some changes to clarify lobbyists' obligations and streamline the Code.

Examples and notes

- Examples and notes in the Code have been removed and incorporated into a separate document, the Guide to the Queensland Registered Lobbyists Code of Conduct and Directives (Guide).
- The Guide includes practical examples and advice for applying the Code.

Paragraph 3

- Paragraph 3 has been revised to make clear that the Code only applies to registered lobbyists in relation to their lobbying activities and their related communications with representatives (i.e. it does not apply to conduct by a lobbyist that is unrelated to their lobbying activities).
- This is consistent with the purpose of the Code as outlined in section 55(3) of the Integrity Act 2009 (Integrity Act).
- The revised paragraph 3 states:

> Application and operation of this Code
>
>
> 3. This Code only applies to lobbyists in relation to their lobbying activities and their communications with representatives in the course of, or in connection to, lobbying activities. The standards of conduct and the conflicts of interest policy set out in this Code are to be interpreted consistently with this paragraph and with the purpose of the Code.

Paragraph 7

- Paragraph 7 (lobbyists to act in accordance with standards of conduct) in the Code that commenced on 17 September 2026 has been removed. The new wording in paragraph 3, and the requirement for registered lobbyists to comply with the Code as noted in paragraph 2, has made paragraph 7 unnecessary.

Appendix 1: Definitions

- A small number of changes have been made to the table of definitions in Appendix 1, to assist readers and reflect changes elsewhere in the Code (e.g. there is a new entry for 'corrupt conduct', and the entry for 'political work' has been removed as that term is no longer used in the Code).

Further changes

- The updated Code also contains a number of changes to the standards of conduct (paragraphs 8 to 28) and the conflicts of interest policy (paragraphs 29 to 36), as described below.

Changes to the standards of conduct

Two standards of conduct have been removed, and one has been added.

- Paragraphs 11 (false or misleading claims) and 12 (conflicts of interest) in the Code that commenced on 17 September 2026 have been removed as it was determined that they were not necessary.
- New paragraph 23 (information about lobbying activities) reflects section 55(5) of the Integrity Act, and has been added to specifically refer to lobbyists' obligations under Directive 06/26 to provide information about lobbying activities to the Integrity Commissioner.

> 55 Code of Conduct
> (5) The registered lobbyists code of conduct may impose obligations on registered lobbyists to give the integrity commissioner information about lobbying activities carried out by them.

Note that the removal of paragraph 12 and the addition of paragraph 23 do not alter lobbyists' obligations in these areas.

Ten standards of conduct have been revised to clarify lobbyists' obligations and when they apply. For example:

- The scope of the standards in paragraph 9 (acting with honesty, integrity and good faith) and paragraph 23 (now 21, reasonable efforts to ensure truth and accuracy) has been clarified (i.e. lobbyists' obligations under these standards are now clearly limited to lobbying activities and related communications with representatives).

- The standard in paragraph 21 (now 19, gifts and benefits) has been changed to clarify the requirements relating to providing gifts to representatives. Lobbyists are required to inform themselves of the policies that apply to representatives in relation to accepting gifts and also act consistently with these in relation to offering or providing gifts to representatives.
- The standards in paragraphs 16 (now 14, placing representatives in conflicts of interest) and 17 (now 15, causing representatives to breach their obligations) have been revised to include a knowledge element.

None of these changes alter lobbyists' overall obligations, and lobbyists who are compliant with the standards in the 17 September Code will continue to be compliant with the standards in the Code commencing on 1 December.

Some minor wording and administrative changes have also been made — note in particular, the paragraphs have been re-numbered.

The table below shows a detailed comparison of the standards of conduct in the Code that commenced on 17 September 2026 and the Code commencing on 1 December 2026, and highlights the changes that have been made.

Changes to the conflicts of interest policy

There have been few changes to the requirements in the conflicts of interest policy.

One requirement has been removed.

- Paragraph 35 (not representing conflicting or competing interests without informed consent) in the Code that commenced on 17 September 2026 has been removed as it was determined that it essentially duplicated the requirements under paragraphs 32 (now 31) and 34 (now 33).

One requirement has been changed.

- The requirement in paragraph 32 (now 31, disclosing conflicts of interest) has been revised and the policy no longer requires lobbyists to disclose conflicts of interest to affected clients.

One requirement has been re-worded to provide greater certainty about what lobbyists' obligations are.

- The requirement in paragraph 30 (now 29, avoiding conflicts of interest) has been revised to make clear that lobbyists are only required to "take reasonable steps" to avoid conflicts of interest, acknowledging that some conflicts may not be reasonably avoidable.

The only other changes are administrative changes, with all requirements having been re-numbered.

The table below shows a detailed comparison of the conflicts of interest requirements in the Code that commenced on 17 September 2026 and the Code commencing on 1 December 2026, and highlights the changes that have been made.

Changes to the Directives

Directive 03/26: Use of official business channels

- The only change is an administrative change (a reference to the Code in the note at the bottom of page 1 has been updated to reflect the Code's new paragraph numbers).

Directive 04/26: Disclosure in first communications

- This has not changed, other than the version number and effective date being updated for consistency with the other updated Directives.

Directive 05/26: Recording new clients in the Queensland Lobbying Register

- This has been repealed because it was identified that the requirements of this Directive may in some cases be inconsistent with lobbyists' obligations under the Integrity Act (specifically, the requirement in section 65 to provide the Integrity Commissioner information about a client within 10 business days of entering into a lobbying agreement with the client).
- While lobbyists no longer need to list a client before undertaking lobbying activity for them, it is best practice to do so for transparency and integrity reasons. In particular, it helps representatives being lobbied to verify the information they receive from lobbyists and be assured that lobbyists are meeting their disclosure obligations.

Directive 06/26: Giving information about lobbying activities to the Integrity Commissioner (formerly Recording lobbying activities in the Queensland Lobbying Register)

- Wording throughout the Directive has been revised to frame lobbyists' obligation as an obligation to give information about lobbying activities to the Integrity Commissioner, which is done via the Queensland Lobbying Register's secure portal. This change aligns the obligation with the wording in section 55(5) of the Integrity Act but does not change lobbyists' obligations in practice.
- Two other changes have been made to provide more certainty about what lobbyists' obligations are:
    1. Under 'Communications providing information about a client need to be notified', the wording of the second example has been revised to ensure that it is clearly a lobbying activity and not something that would be excluded from the definition of a lobbying activity by section 43 of the Integrity Act.
    2. Under 'What information must be given to the Queensland Integrity Commissioner for each lobbying activity?', further details have been included in paragraph c) to make clear that lobbyists must provide the name of the agency where a representative is employed (where applicable) as part of the requirement to provide the representative's full name and title/position. This is consistent with the existing examples.
